REPAIR DAMAGED COLLAGEN

HOW THEY WORK | Comparable to peptides, growth factors are proteins that communicate to certain cells that new collagen needs to be made. There are three types of growth factors and all work toward preserving or repairing collagen:

- transforming growth factors accelerate collagen and elastin production, deter the enzymes that break down collagen and elastin, and reduce inflammation
- epidermal growth factors repair damaged skin cells as needed and improve tone and texture
- kinetin is a plant-derived antioxidant (it prevents leaves from drying out) that encourages cell division
