

DO'S AND DON'TS LIST

Remember, everyone's skin is different. Use these instructions as guidelines for your own skin care needs to fully customize your treatments.

DO'S

1. Watch the training video and read all instructions before beginning your first treatment. Remember to practice on your arm or leg before your face.
2. Wash the skin so it is completely free of all make up, oils, lotions and dirt. We recommend the Advanced Soothing Cleanser.
3. Make sure the skin is dry before your treatment.
4. Pull the skin taut with a hand or finger so that the Personal Microderm will glide over the skin smoothly. Move quickly.
5. Begin your first treatment with the white training disc. Then, depending on your skin type, advance to the grey, then blue, then if needed green or red for the most intense treatment. Remember that all skin types are different. Go at your own pace.
6. If you have very sensitive skin, after you practice the Personal Microderm on your arm or leg, move to the neck area. Wait 3 to 4 minutes to see if there are any adverse reactions before proceeding.
7. Always keep the tool moving while performing a treatment.
8. Use the small disc for the face and the large disc for the body.
9. Ensure the disc sits slightly below the top of the cap. Do this by pushing the disc down after the cap is in place. Do not use the small disc with the large cap.
10. Apply sun screen daily.
11. Do a treatment once every 6-7 days. This allows time for the skin to rejuvenate. During a treatment, you are removing the dead skin. During the next 6-7 days, your skin will be recovering and regrowing new skin cells.
12. Clean the cap, disc and filter with alcohol or antibacterial liquid and let dry.

DONT'S

1. Do not use any intense skin care treatments such as chemical peel products (alpha and beta hydroxy acid, retin A or retinol prior to or within 48 hours of using the Personal Microderm. Use common sense and good judgment. Do not over do it.
2. Do not use the Personal Microderm without first consulting a physician if you are using Accutane.
3. Do not use the Personal Microderm without first consulting a physician if you have any serious skin conditions, if you have extremely sensitive skin or if are taking any prescriptions that will impact your skin.
4. Do not use directly above the eye bone or below the brow bone. Your skin is loose and thin. Stay away from those areas.

5. Do not allow the tool to hover in one spot. If this happens, do not be alarmed. You may have red marks or scabs. Simply use a good recovery moisturizer and sunscreen. After a few days, you will have fresh new skin.

6. Do not use the Personal Microderm over the same spot of skin multiple times. The effects of the device are not always immediately visible, so you must be careful. After several uses, you will learn how to best perform each treatment for your skin type.

7. Do not continue to use the Personal Microderm if you feel any pain during the treatment. Pain is a sign that you have been too aggressive. You may have hovered, gone too slow or done multiple passes. Learn from each treatment to customize the right treatment for you.
